President's Message

When I think of Christmas, my mind and heart reflect on peace. We live in a world today where there is little of it: our work lives are fast and intense: home life and activities are ever ongoing; political parties unable to agree on the time of day. When all of this is going on, I think of the words of St. Augustine (354-430 (A.D.) from his work "Confessions" — "our hearts are restless until they rest in thee." Then I realize that for peace in my life, in my work, in my family, in our world, that it starts with me being at rest, being at peace.

That is my wish and prayer for all of you this time of year. It is my wish and prayer for our government leaders, for our world, for each of you and your families and your organizations. It is one world that we all share as brothers and sisters regardless of race, color, religion, origin, or sex. It is my Christmas wish for myself for when I can be at peace, then I can be a spreader of peace.
