

Mount Carmel and Trinity Health released a new campaign called Care for the Common Good starting mid-September and running until Oct. 30. The campaign is designed to educate all stakeholders about the importance of four essential principles regarding health policy:

- Everyone should have access to high-quality, comprehensive health care.
- Investment in Public Health is critical to our nation's safety and economic health.
- Improving the health of communities is the right thing to do.
- Affordable, high-value health care is achievable.

Through a variety of national and local communication channels, Care for the Common Good will provide daily data points on each of those areas. The nonpartisan campaign ultimately asks interested parties to sign a pledge showing support for those principles. Trinity Health's goal is to send the final pledge and signatures to each Presidential campaign.
